What is same sex domestic violence?

Domestic violence is abusive behaviour used by one person in a relationship to dominate and control another, irrespective of the label attached to describe the relationship. The abusive behaviour generally has a pattern to it and is repeated. The result is that the person subjected to the violence lives in fear and intimidation.

The law in Queensland defines domestic violence as behaviour that is:

- Physically or Sexually abusive;
- Emotionally or Psychologically abusive;
- Economically abusive;
- Threatening or coercive; or
- In any other way controls or dominates another person or causes them to fear for their safety or the safety of someone else.

Even if domestic violence is not committed personally, someone who incites another to commit these acts is recognized as committing domestic violence.

You are not to blame and you are not alone

Domestic violence often takes place 'behind closed doors'. As with heterosexual relationships, it is believed that the level of domestic violence in GLBT relationships is far higher than reported.

It can be difficult for those who are, or who have experienced violence to come forward because they may feel isolated, ashamed, confused or just too afraid to speak about their experiences.

The fear of hostility from a homophobic society may also make it difficult for victims to break the silence. Myths surrounding same sex domestic violence such as the belief that it is a fair fight between equals and that when gay men fight it is just 'boys being boys' means victims may worry that no-one will believe them. Often abusive partners have used homophobia and heterosexism as a weapon of control over their partner.

Sometimes those being abused blame themselves for the violence because they have been told by their partner on many occasions, that they 'provoked' it.

Remember

- No one deserves to be abused.
- You have the right to be safe and live free from violence.
- The person being abusive is responsible for their own behaviour.
- Abuse happens to people from all walks of life, cultures and age groups.

The Domestic and Family Violence Protection Act 1989 includes same sex couples under the definition of spouse. This means that GLBT men and women can have some protection from their violent partner or ex-partner.

A Domestic Violence Protection Order (DVPO) is a civil court order that constrains a person's behaviour towards another. If they breach the DVPO this becomes a criminal matter and is dealt with accordingly.
